STAUNTON, AT AUST 2, 1875. Much could be written at wat the thrift of Staunton, but I will forbes A There are, however, a large number of strangers living and doing business here no a and I cronot better describe the growth and prosperity of the place than to repeat what Mr. H. V. Redfield said the other day as he passed through on his way to some of the springs: "Stauston is more like a Yankee town than any I have seen in any of the southern States or Virginia." He intended his remark, no soubt, as a compliment. It is a very doubtful question, however, whether the good people of Augusta will so revard it. They are very touchy on that subject, as well as many others, but especially upon that one. But it is not fair be tell of their peculiarities.

DRUMGIERS. Our Richmond merchants and businessmen complain of the little trade they have with Stanton and the country in the Valley. Now, there is a reason why our merchants don't get the trade. One of the shrewdest business-men in this place told me on Saturday that Richmond drummers never come here. There have been four droumers here in one year-i.e., two seasons: lest fall and this spring. At Harrisonburg only one Richmond soliciter has benored this country with his society. You never hear any scandal here, and there is little or no gossip to be discussed. The men don't know much, and the girls won't tell you what they do know. Staunton is very envious of Richmond church-music. One of the Staunton churchmen told me Saturday morning that if the tolks here were to hear Tanner's choir once they'd go crazy. Somehow or other it seems impossible to get the singers to stick. There is certainly talent here, but why they can't utilize it in the choirs I can't sec. He also had much to say about the Monumental music, and asked whether Tunner and Wheat had as fine audiences as they used to. He said that the Trinity church had been the means of doing a vast deal of good. He mentioned the names of some well-known and highly-respected "old sinners" who had come into the fold. They have built a beautiful new brick Gothic Sunday-school room on the side of the church, and the good which Mr. Hullihen and bis earnest workers are doing is marked. The church, thinking they would probably try to rival Major Tanner. "Well," said be, "that church is getting along pretty well, but not near so well, in a musical point of view, as the Presbyterian church. We want some of the Richmond talent and musical energy to

GOLD HILL, BUCKINGHAM COUNTY, VA., ? July 29, 1875. One may have travelled on a Pulman under a July sun on the "raging canawl" and revelled in all of the luxurles of the packet. Well, I have just had that privilege, but feel so utterly inadequate to the task of describing the trip that I shall not attempt it. I will only say that I was firmly conunder a July sun on the "raging canawl" it. I will only say that I was firmly con-vinced that Paddy was right when he said of down, and the lights were extinguished, the name of the thing I would as soon walk." But the splendid crops along the route, the enabled me to land at New Canton, in the good old county of Buckingham, in tolerable fiercely, and nearly all the uncaged animals fair plight, and to enjoy a trot of nine miles church. Most of the morning hour was consumed in considering the claims of foreign missions, and at 111 o'clock the Association adjourned for preaching, and Rev. Edmond Harrison, of Richmond College, preached an admirable sermon from the text: "And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." The afternoon session was occupied with an earnest discussion of an excellent report on Sate Missions presented by Rev. T. N. Johnson. This morning, after attending to various items of routine business, the body con-

In the afternoon the "ministers' relief fund? was fully considered. There was a deck of a vessel. It is said to be equal in liberal cash collection to the spot, and the power to 800,000 standard candles, and to be delegates pledged themselves to make regular collections at their churches for this important object. Then followed reports and discussions on Sunday-school work, the Virgicia Bible Society, Tamily worship, temperence, systematic beneficence, and pastoral support.

The report on temperance took strong ground against the manufacture, sale, or use as a heverage of intoxicating liquors, and the speakers all warmly endorsed this position. Rev. T. N. Johnson insisted that doctors frequently do great barm by prescribing whiskey for those who soon become drunk-

The Association determined to meet next year with the Cumberland church, and elected Rev. L. B. Thornhill to preach the sermon, and Rev. T. N. Johnson as alter-

Much of this will be added through the water-closets. Thus you may say twenty gallons a day without waste may be taken as a kind of average. For trades you must allow ten gallons more as a rule. If there are public baths, and where there are many animals, as horses, which require a nout twelve or fifteen gallons a head for washing and drinking, you must make a greater allowance. You will see that about thirty gallons a head a day is the least even where there is no extra demand, and that is about the amount provided in London, and that is payers need apply. about the least that you should aim at. Professor Rankine tells you that thirty-five gallons is the greatest amount necessary. However, they don't think so everywhere. New York manages to get through 300 gallons, and does not find it too much. In ancient Rome (to show you that these matters have been thought of a long time ago) they had nine aqueducts to bring water to the city. They thought it of so much importance that sevemusic here he said was passable. I next in- ral of these aqueducts were from forty-two quired about the music at the Baptist to forty-nine miles long, and one of them, tinus, who was the superintendent, and wrote a most excellent work about them, giving accurate descriptions and measurements of them, tells us the two most recent were made because the seven already in existence "seemed scarcely sufficient for public pur-poses and private amusements."
